

ABSTRACT

Aspects of performing single frame backwards playback in a DVD system are described. The aspects include receiving a signal indicating selection of a single frame reverse function. Frame data for a preceding frame of an original playback is then reconstructed while utilizing memory sufficient to support the reconstruction. The reconstructed frame data of the preceding frame is then displayed.